A Cat's Tale

In one of the most bizarre cases, a woman named Mary Tommie sued her cat for $10,000 after the feline scratched her. Tommie claimed that her cat, Mittens, had attacked her without provocation. The cat, of course, could not defend itself in court. However, the judge ruled in favor of Tommie, awarding her $5,000 in damages.

Suing the Almighty

In another case, a man named Daniel Mallory sued God for $100 million, claiming that God had caused him emotional distress. Mallory claimed that God had failed to protect him from a car accident that left him paralyzed. The judge, not surprisingly, dismissed the case.

These are just a few of the many hilarious and outrageous stories in this book. If you're looking for a good laugh, this is the book for you.
