TARGET BEHAVIORS (PSYCHOLOGY)
A target behavior is the specific actions of an individual that are selected for modification in behavioral psychology.

DEFINITION

The term target behavior in Applied Behavior Analysis (ABA) is the behavior that you want to modify, remove, replace, or change.

Before implementing an ABA behavior modification intervention, the clinician aims to clearly name the target behavior in what we call an operational definition.

EXAMPLE

- Urge to reach for a device: Many adults suffer from electronic device addiction. They may need to target this impulse and try to modify it through ABA.
- Making disruptive noises: A student talking or making noises excessively in class may require ABA targeting these behaviors to help them blend into class well.
